The Sydney Morning Herald.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 23, 1883.

Dr. RENWICK has gone to work in a singular way to win the confidence of the East Sydney electors. Having forfeited it by his conduct as a Minister, in sacrificing his opinions upon the vital principles of the land law to party interests, or rather to the interests of the half-dozen men with whom he was associated in the late Ministry, he now comes forward to acknowledge what he did, and defend it as a right thing. He says, in effect, What I have done I would do again. He thus shows that the lesson of the general election has been thrown away upon him. Having displayed as a Minister a disregard of the first principles of political morality, he now leaves the electors to understand that he must have acted under the influence of either a deliberate determination to set them aside, or an invincible ignorance of their character and importance. The latter supposition seems the more probable of the two; but neither can be considered as an inducement to the electors to give him another trial. He does not say, Return me again, and I will do better next time; but Return me again, and if occasion should arise, I will again betray the public interest to save my friends."

Dr. RENWICK has clearly shown that in his view the public interest requires a radical change in the principles of the land law, and it was with "compunction" that he became a party to the introduction of a bill which provided for such radical change. Who cares about his compunction if he was ready to overrule it and commit himself? But the point to be observed is, that not only did he commit himself, he was one of the Government that committed itself, and that used its influence to get the House to commit itself. If Dr. RENWICK and his colleagues could have procured the second reading of that Land Bill, they would have procured not merely the approval of a bill which provided for no radical change, they would have procured by implication a formal declaration of opinion that no radical change was required. He says that he and other members of the Government expected that alterations and amendments would be made in committee. The alterations and amendments that would have made the bill serve the purposes of reform which Dr. RENWICK wants to see accomplished would have been a great deal more serious matters than those substitutions of twaddledum for twaddledoo which any Mini-try can accept in committee. To make the bill an effective measure of reform, it must have been so changed that its author would have failed to recognise it. Sir JOHN ROBERTSON, at any rate, must have refused to go on with it as amended, and the Ministry must either have dropped it or parted with Sir JOHN ROBERTSON. But clearly, if this last contingency was anticipated, the honest and straightforward course would have been to settle matters with Sir JOHN ROBERTSON before the introduction of the bill in its original shape was assented to. Dr. RENWICK says it would have been cowardice if he had deserted his friends in a time of difficulty. Was it quite fair and honourable towards Sir JOHN ROBERTSON if his colleagues accepted his bill in the Cabinet with the idea of throwing him overboard with his policy in the Assembly? Unless something of this sort was contemplated, this talk about looking forward to "alterations and amendments in committee" is without meaning.

Dr. RENWICK says "he would rather fight with his friends in a cause, even if it seemed a little doubtful, than desert them and leave them to die." If the late Assembly had not possessed a clearer insight into matters of political principle, and rejected the Land Bill on the second reading, he would probably have been found fighting against at least one of his friends—the one at whose instance he had consented to an act which caused him "compunction." But, passing by that consideration, it may be asked whether the policy of the late Ministry in the matter of the Land Bill was rightly to be called a cause that "seemed a little doubtful." The dissolution of Parliament because the second reading had been refused, and the resignation of the Ministry because that refusal had been approved by the country, show that the application of this description is a needless misuse of terms or the result of a misapprehension of the whole situation. The Land question is one of the most important with which a Ministry or Parliament can deal. The Ministry, in introducing its bill and asking the Assembly to pass the second reading, invited Parliament to establish anew the distinctive principles of the present law. When dissolved, the appeal was an invitation to the country to repudiate this refusal and send in other men who would re-establish the present land system. The only legitimate and logical result of the action of the late Ministry in either case, had the Ministry attained success, would have been the confirmation of the present land system by Parliament or the country. Yet Dr. RENWICK, who knows that that would be a public evil, contributed his part to bring it about, and now talks about fighting in a cause that seemed a little doubtful rather than desert his friends. Is that the language, can such be the course, of a competently instructed and trustworthy politician?

We have heard a great deal within the last few weeks about faithfulness to friends on the part of public men. Faithfulness to friends is an admirable thing in both public and private life, but that man is hardly qualified for public life who in the name of friendship consents to action that he knows to be against the public interest, and then defends it. Loyalty to colleagues is an excellent thing; but loyalty to colleagues that overrides political honesty in questions of first magnitude is not a title to the confidence of the electors. When Dr. RENWICK first determined to accept loyalty to colleagues instead of faithfulness to principle as his guide in this matter of the land law, he placed himself in an essentially false position, and under the obligation either to occupy a series of false positions, or to expose his want of the political insight or the honesty necessary in public life. There was no announcement that the Land question was an open question in the late Ministry. The course of action agreed upon was a course to which every Minister was committed. The introduction of the bill committed every Minister to the second reading. The second reading would have committed every Minister to the resistance of all attempts to radically amend the bill. The dissolution upon the second reading committed every Minister to the defence of the bill before the country voluntarily tongue-tied, so far as his own convictions went, but practically asking for power to carry out a policy of which he disapproved. Had he and his late colleagues returned with a majority in support of the course they had openly pursued, they would have been bound to follow out that course, and to throw their private convictions, or private understandings, to the winds. That would have been their only way of proving that they had done right in appealing to the country. But considerations of this kind appear to have had no weight with Dr. RENWICK. Either they did not occur to him, or he knowingly disregarded them. In other words, he has proved himself to be wanting in either political intelligence or in faithfulness to principle. But those are essential qualifications of the efficient and trustworthy representative. Dr. RENWICK was a candidate on political grounds at the general election. He then stood forth as responsible for the Land Bill, and the electors, disapproving of the Land Bill, struck off his name. He now, like Mr. MITCHELL at Newington, opposes the MINISTER FOR WORKS on personal grounds, and says, Prefer me to him. Is he to be preferred because, believing in one policy, he voted for another, and deserts the public interest rather than desert his friends?

The outcry that has been made against Mr. COPELAND with reference to the Chinese question is not very creditable to those who have raised it, and will not give them much satisfaction in reflecting upon it. It is certainly not very flattering to the electors on their intellectual side to assume that they are gullible enough to believe all that is told them, and not very flattering to them on their moral side to suppose that they are willing to sink all political considerations for the sake of wreaking revenge on a man who was opposed to anything like injustice or cruelty towards the Chinese. It was gravely charged against Mr. COPELAND that at some time or other of his career he had employed Chinamen. It did not happen to be true; but supposing it had been, what then? How many of the electors of East Sydney are there who have never purchased anything at a Chinese shop, and have never taken advantage of the presence of the Chinese as traders—who have never knowingly bought anything that was imported by a Chinese merchant, or retailed out by travelling Chinese vendors? How many working men in East Sydney have allowed their wives to economise the week's earnings by buying groceries at Chinese shops, and how many have purchased vegetables grown or retailed by Chinamen? Of all the electors who have done this, who is entitled to cast the first stone at Mr. COPELAND? Is there any difference in principle between buying vegetables of a Chinese gardener and employing a Chinese gardener; and can any one say that the Chinese gardeners have been either superfluous or injurious? If these men have been admitted of service in their vocation, where is the justice or humanity of boycotting them, or those who have patronised them? If inquisition were made into the homes of East Sydney electors, in how many of them should we find Chinese-made furniture? Are the owners of this furniture, who have enjoyed the benefit of its cheapness, justified in raving at any one who has ever employed a Chinaman? Every elector of East Sydney who has availed himself indirectly of Chinese labour, has as much encouraged the industry of Chinamen here as Mr. COPELAND would have done if he had employed them in his gold and tin mines, and it is a piece of arrant hypocrisy, which does not smell sweet, for such men to come to the hustings and hoot Mr. COPELAND as an alleged sympathiser with Chinamen.

After all, what is it that he really did? It is something which he may look back upon with pride and satisfaction. He opposed the unnecessary, and therefore the unjust and inhumane, clauses of the Chinese Restriction Act. The tonnage restriction he supported, and that was all that was necessary to prevent Chinese coming here in any dangerous numbers. That clause was all that the occasion required, but the bill that was introduced by the Government was wantonly cruel in its excess. This wanton cruelty Mr. COPELAND opposed, and he was backed up by the calm moderation of the Legislative Council—which House was roundly abused by the Government for the purification it effected in the bill. Every one who withheld the Government on that occasion deserves the thanks of the colony for preventing shameful enactments from staining our Statute Book. Mr. COPELAND was one of them; and yet the attempt has been made by those who ought to know better to class his virtue as a crime.

Much reproach has been cast upon Mr. COPELAND on the ground that his doctrinal system is not sufficiently Christian. If the tree is known by its fruits, then Mr. COPELAND's conduct towards the Chinese was greatly more Christian than that of his accusers. The bill, as introduced by the Government, certainly could not boast of much Christianity, nor even of much common humanity. It was greatly improved by the blood-letting to which it was exposed, and would have been still further improved had it been made still paler. Ex-Ministers have never been called upon for their theological views, and therefore it is impossible to say whether they were superior to Mr. COPELAND in this respect. So far as the Chinese Bill as they introduced it was a test of their Christianity, Mr. COPELAND has the best of the comparison. It is certainly somewhat singular that those who live in glass houses should have taken so wildly to the game of throwing stones.

In Committee of Ways and Means on Thursday, Mr. COPELAND raised a question of great importance; one to which it is important that the Government give attention. He pointed out that the Commissioner, having two accounts to operate upon, viz., capital and revenue, sometimes charges to the former what certainly ought to be put down to the latter. We have quite recently called attention to this matter, and are glad to see an ex-Minister, who must know many of the ways of the Works Department, taking it up so promptly. It is necessary to be quite clear what expenditure should be placed against capital, and what against revenue; and up to the present no very satisfactory division has been made. If we lay down rails, construct engines and rolling stock generally, and build goods sheds and station-houses, all this is fairly chargeable to capital. But when any of these fall into disrepair by use, obviously the cost of such repairs should be charged to revenue. And not only the cost of repairs, but also their necessary depreciation by use. The cost of all manner of material things used to carry on any business is of the nature of an insurance. There is an average life for a steam-engine, for a mill, for a bridge, for a station-house, indeed for the whole outfit of a railway. Every year there are losses and less value, and in private and public enterprises a fair sum is written off on each account. We do not know that that is done for our railways. And this is not the only form of depreciation from which railways suffer. Many cases have occurred of pulling down and re-building station-houses, because they were too small or had been eaten to rotteness by white ants. The first building is charged to capital, so is the second. If we are to be guided in this as in other business, we shall charge to capital only such things as augment the value of assets, and charge to revenue all that depreciates. The difference in value between an old building and a new one may be fairly enough put down to capital, but the balance deficiency must go against revenue. Then, also, we are constantly renewing the rails, the lifetime of a rail being very brief. If all these rails are bought into stock, and for a station-house, indeed for the whole outfit of a railway. And this is not the only form of depreciation from which railways suffer. Many cases have occurred of pulling down and re-building station-houses, because they were too small or had been eaten to rotteness by white ants. And this is not the only form of depreciation from which railways suffer. Many cases have occurred of pulling down and re-building station-houses, because they were too small or had been eaten to rotteness by white ants. The first building is charged to capital, so is the second. If we are to be guided in this as in other business, we shall charge to capital only such things as augment the value of assets, and charge to revenue all that depreciates. The difference in value between an old building and a new one may be fairly enough put down to capital, but the balance deficiency must go against revenue. Then, also, we are constantly renewing the rails, the lifetime of a rail being very brief. If all these rails are bought into stock, and for a station-house, indeed for the whole outfit of a railway. VICTORIA.

MELBOURNE, MONDAY.

At a Conference of the Chamber of Commerce and the Chamber of Manufactures, to-day, a debate was commenced on the immigration question, and it was ultimately adjourned, it being agreed to invite delegates from the Trades Hall Committee to take part in the discussion.

The Hon. J. M. Grant, Chief Secretary, and Mr. Bent, Minister of Railways, were present at the laying of the foundation stone of the Hobart Free Trade Hall.

The latter defended himself against the adverse criticisms of his administration of the railways, and attributed the hostility of the press to the fact of his having abolished the system of issuing free press passes.

The Government steamer Dispatch started this morning in search of the schooner Louis, which has been long overdue from Hobart. There is now very slight hope entertained that the search will prove successful.

The Tariff Commission to-morrow proceed to the Wimmera district. On Wednesday they will take evidence at Horsham relative to the manufacturing and agricultural industries. On Thursday they will sit at Dimboola, where an inquiry will be made into the complaints which have been frequently made in regard to the unequal operation of the border duties between Victoria and South Australia, which it is alleged, is injurious and detrimental to the local trade. The commissioners are then to proceed to Lake Hindmarsh. They return to town on Saturday.

In connection with the conference between the Wesleyans of Victoria and Tasmania at present sitting in Melbourne, the first session for this year of the mixed conference, comprising clerical and lay representatives, was held this evening.

The president, the Rev. E. I. Watkin, delivered the address in the course of which he remarked that every now and then a movement was made by the Anglican Church with the object of getting the Wesleyans back to the fold from which it was said they had strayed. He ridiculed the assertion put forward in England that it was the ambition of Wesleyan ministers that prevented the Wesleyan people going back to the Anglican Church. He urged that the Wesleyan Church owed much of its success to the fact that it, more than any other church, employed laymen. The Methodist Church had no division, it being the glory of Methodism that some truths were preached from all their pulpits, and there had never been separation from the church on any doctrinal question. He hoped that the time was not far distant when they would have a Wesleyan Methodist College affiliated to the Melbourne University.

During the voyage of the schooner Gustav Adolf, one of the crew named Carl Mowat, aged 19 years, fell overboard and was drowned whilst drawing a bucket of water.

It was officially announced to-day that the lowest record for the first section, 26 miles of the Bacchus Marsh line, was that of John Robb, in the sum of £215.30. On a previous occasion, when tenders were invited, all were considered too high.

A horrible discovery was made to-day at the mining township of Maryborough to-day. Two Chinese men were found, one lying in full length on the floor, the other in a kneeling position, both apparently with their throats cut, but their heads in addition almost severed by vermin. It was impossible to definitely ascertain the cause of death, but it is supposed that they have been dead fully three weeks.

The arrangements at St. Patrick's Cathedral for an international fair are progressing satisfactorily, space being allotted to the 12 nationalities that are to be represented.

Several of the foreign consuls have granted their patronage to the event.

The English and Australian teams of cricketers will leave for Sydney to-morrow.

At a meeting of the bootmakers' union, this evening, two delegates were appointed to wait upon the masters' association in support of the scale of prices recently adopted. At a meeting of master butchers this evening, it was decided that the hours of the nail butchers should be 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. on all days except Saturdays, when the shops close at 10 o'clock at night.

An elderly man named Frederick Brown was seriously injured at the Richmond Station this evening through being jammed between a carriage and the platform in attempting to enter a carriage while the train was in motion. He lies in the hospital in a critical condition.

The Legislative Council Chamber was lit up with 7400 electric light this evening, for the purpose of the meeting terminated.

HOMEBOURNE RACETRACK.

HOMEBOURNE RACECOURSE.

FIRST SALE SATURDAY, FEB. 10.

LARGE BLINDS FOR VILLA SITES, BUSINESS SITES, ON PARAMATTA ROAD.

TURBENS' TITLE.

CHOCES OF TERMS.

WATKIN AND WATKIN, instructed by F. Wentworth, Esq., will sell THE ESTATE OF THE HOMEBURNE RACETRACK, ON SATURDAY, FEB. 10.

ON HOMEBOURNE RACETRACK.

That historic sporting ground on which before Handwick the great events were contested, comprising as it does the site of the famous racecourse, to be sold beyond the new racing in the city of Sydney, and to be available on or embraced within the ever-increasing circle of populated requirements.

The HOMEBURNE ESTATE stretches from the Paramatta River to the Parramatta-road, from the Parramatta-road to the railway, and across the railway. The property is well situated, and is to be planned, from the Parramatta-road to the river, embracing the valuable frontages to the Paramatta-road, from nearly opposite the Homestead, making in the city of Sydney, and to be available on or embraced within the ever-increasing circle of populated requirements.

An Estate of the magnitude of HOMEBOURNE.

In view of a scientific and liberal mode of subdivision, and an inspection of the plan will show that Messrs. Parrott and Roberts have observed both the letter and spirit of the law.

LARGE BLOCKS

not elsewhere obtainable, affording ample room for the erection of numerous residences.

WIDE ROADS

mid out after careful and minute surveys, to admit of pleasant drives and easy access to all parts of the estate, and to afford opportunity to utilize and furnish a pleasing departure from traditional subdivision.

RESERVE

CRICKET GROUND, SCHOOL RESERVE, ETC.

DRIVE FOR BOATHEDS, &c., &c., and, as will be seen from the plan, provision is made for the erection of a

RAILWAY STATION

on the other portion of the Estate, with direct roads leading thereto, from the portion now offered.

THE BUSINESS SITES

have all that necessary provision, a wide road at the rear of every allotment.

The suburbs are becoming overcrowded, the subdivision of the original estates, and the re-subdivision, into small lots, has been so general that it is only now and again that a sufficient area can be obtained to construct a comfortable residence, and to be purchased at such a price as to be available on or embraced within the city of Sydney.

Large blocks should ensure the creation of good buildings.

It is almost useless to add that is all cleared and stamped, a great consideration to

Parties Building, or Laying-out Gardens,

Lawns, and orchards.

That is all.

The vendors are the representatives of the Original Grantees, and that this estate has not been sighted until several years in advance of its market value.

Buyers will doubtless understand our meaning.

The title is under 'Torrens' Act.

The following terms are at the choice of buyers:

Less than 10 per cent. deposit, if balance paid within 30 days.

No. 1—2 per cent. deposit, balance by four equal quarterly payments.

No. 2—10 per cent. deposit, balance by eight equal quarterly payments.

Interest 4 per cent.

Time to pay off, 12 months; balance may be paid off at any time with interest to date.

Interest 6 per cent, from date of purchase, payable half-yearly.

No mortgage expenses.

Plans now in lithographer's hands.

Advertiser: Messrs. SALTER, and BARKER, Surveyors; MUNROE, PARROTT and ROBERTS.

ON WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON Waggoners will meet parties desirous of inspecting. Cards on application.

RUGBY PARK, ROCKWOOD.

CLOSE TO AND OVERLOOKING STATION.

A similarly large elevated block of property, with the same easy distance of station, cannot possibly be brought into the market.

TURBENS' TITLE.

Terms: 10s deposit, balance by $4 equal monthly payments.

Interest only 5 per cent.

Survey completed. Plans in a day or two.
